

Aberdeen Chinese School

Aberdeen Chinese School was established in 1991 to promote the Chinese language and culture in the city and surrounding area. With assistance and guidance from Aberdeen City Council, Education Department, the School became a member of ACVO in 1998.

Located at Linksfield Community Centre in King Street, The Aberdeen Chinese School is unique in Aberdeen serving not only the ethnic minority group but also to the wider general public.

The school is a multi-services community based education provider.

The Chinese School offers –

- Education in the Chinese language and culture
- The promotion of Chinese art and cultural exchange
- Teaching Chinese one to one
- Talks and courses for schools and businesses
- Editing and translation of Chinese documents
- Assistance to the Education department to link up schools with China

Our main activities are to offer opportunities for children and adults in Aberdeen and the surrounding area who are interested in studying the Chinese language and culture.

Children also have the chance to learn other activities such as piano and painting in recognition that play is a vital part of school life, important in developing creativity and self-expression, and in promoting self-confidence. This of course benefits their study of other projects.

We also provide training courses, to the national standard known as HSK, in basic business Chinese for Aberdeen based businesses and enterprises who are looking to develop in the Chinese market.

The school also organise meditation classes.

Medicine & Meditation

Chinese medicine and acupuncture are recognised worldwide for their success in the treatment of a diverse range of ailments. The low risk of adverse reactions and side effects from Chinese Medicine treatments has been seen as one of the greatest advantages. It is our goal to make the learning and training of these techniques more accessible.

Our Aberdeen based traditional Chinese medicine training facility, composed of experienced academic and practicing Chinese medical professionals will introduce and popularise the essential knowledge and skills of Chinese Medicine, Acupuncture, Massage & healthcare.

Students who successfully complete all programs will have a fundamental basic knowledge of Traditional Chinese Medicine, Acupuncture and Tui Na Massage. Further study and clinical training with real patients in Chinese universities of Traditional Medicine with which we have links can be arranged.

Full training will open up a range of viable and exciting career possibilities, including that of developing a thriving professional practice.

Chinese Language

As China has advanced and integrates further with the rest of the world, the desire to learn the Chinese language has been on the increase. We now develop all our language classes towards China's Hanyu Shuiping Kaoshi, also known as HSK. This is a Chinese Proficiency test, or the national standardised test.

HSK was developed by Beijing Language and Culture University to assess the Chinese language proficiency of non-native speakers, including foreigners, overseas Chinese and students from Chinese national minorities.

HSK is not based on any particular textbook or course of study.

Therefore candidates may refer to any textbook in preparing for the test.
